Market commentary

The Reserve Bank of Australia (RBA) left interest rates unchanged at both its November and December meetings, signalling that inflationary forces, a tight labour market and strengthening economic activity would keep the threshold for any future rate cuts high.

A stronger-than-expected October core inflation result, released in November, shifted market expectations towards the possibility of further rate hikes. However, a sharper-than-anticipated fall in November employment — more than 21,000 jobs lost and slowing economic conditions dampened expectations.

Copper prices climbed to a new record above USD 12,000 per tonne on the London Metals Exchange, driven largely by constrained supply over the quarter. Gold also hit an all-time high in December following the US Federal Reserve's 25-basis-point rate cut, despite inflation remaining elevated in the US economy.

The Australian 10-year bond yield rose 0.30% to finish the month at 4.80%. The US Treasury continues to issue a large amount of short-term debt to fund the federal government's deficit. Geopolitical factors globally continue to cause market volatility.

Australian equity market

Australian market was volatile in fourth quarter mirroring global markets, largely driven by weakness in technology stocks.

Australian stocks, as measured by the S&P/ASX 300, declined 0.89% in the fourth quarter. Across the quarter, most sectors within the S&P/ASX 300 delivered negative returns.

Technology and consumer discretionary were notably weaker and led the underperformers, while materials and energy posted positive gains and outperformed the broader market.
